Local Arrangements for the Atlanta Meeting Nearing Completion

Julius Debro, local arrangements chair for the ASC meeting in Atlanta, is happy to report that plans are proceeding on course. His committee, consisting also of Gene Slade, Larry Linker and Damon Camp, has confirmed the following arrangements.

On Thursday, October 30, there will be a three-hour tour of the City of Atlanta. Among the sights will be Peachtree Center, Georgia's gold-domed capitol, the Dr. Martin Luther King Memorial, elegant homes amid acres of greenery, the Woodruff Art Museum, and the Coca-Cola Company's headquarters.

On Friday, October 31, there will be an afternoon visit to Stone Mountain Park. 3200 acres of scenic beauty, together with the world's largest sculpture, a completely restored Antebellum plantation, and a cable car ride to the top of the Mountain. Prices for both tours are $13.00 each per person, and reservations need to be made by October 10. (To reserve seats, send a check or money order to Guidelines Atlanta, P.O. Box 52503, Atlanta, GA 30355).

For persons interested in corrections, there will be tours on two different days of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary. At present, the Muriel Cubans are housed in the facility, but it is perhaps best known as the "home" of Al Capone.

The University of Louisville has agreed to sponsor a cocktail party, and Georgia Power Company has donated substantial funds for a free luncheon on opening day, at which time the principal speaker will be Mayor Andrew Young. That evening there will also be a no-host cocktail party at the top of the Hilton Hotel.

The Local Arrangements Committee will supply a list of both moderate and inexpensively priced restaurants, and inexpensive housing will also be made available for students coming to the convention. Debro suggests that conferees bring swimwear because the Marriott Hotel has a large, covered swimming and entertainment area.

Criminology Editor Sought

Joan Petersilia, ASC vice president and chair of the Publications Committee, has announced that the Society has commenced its search for the next editor of the journal, CRIMINOLOGY. It is expected that the Executive Board will review applications and select the new editor at the November 1986 ASC meeting in Atlanta, Georgia.

Since a great deal of time must be devoted to this quarterly publication, all prospective candidates not only must describe personal credentials in an application but also indicate that the base agency or university is willing to provide the back-up resources required for such an effort.

The new editor will officially take charge of the journal in January 1987, however, it has become the tradition of ASC that he or she will work with the outgoing editor for several months after that time in order to become familiar with publications procedures. The term of editor is three years. All candidates should be aware that the ASC no longer relies on an outside publisher but publishes the journal itself. Tasks such as copy editing, proofing, and working with the printer are now required.

All serious candidates should communicate with Petersilia regarding details that will be required in the application. Submission deadline: September 30, 1986. For additional technical information, candidates should communicate with the present editor, Joseph Weis (206) 545-2043.

Petersilia's address is The Rand Corporation, 1700 Main Street, Santa Monica, California 90406.

ACLS/FORD Fellowships Available

The American Council of Learned Societies and the Ford Foundation have joined to support humanistic research on social issues. Among the specific research interests to be considered for funding are investigations of the cultural and philosophical assumptions implicit in concepts and practices of crime and punishment. Interested ASC members should contact ACLS Fellowships, American Council of Learned Societies, 228 East 45th Street, New York, N.Y. 10017-3398. Inquiries call 212-697-1505. The deadline for applications is September 30, 1986.

CJSA MEETING

"State Analysts Turning Data Into Policy" is the theme of the 1986 Annual Meeting of the Criminal Justice Statistics Association (CJSA). The two and one-half day meeting, supported by the Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS), will focus on how analysts become an integral part of the policy-making process. It will draw on the research and experiences of state Statistical Analysis Centers, the expertise of leading figures in national criminal justice organizations, and the advice of state policymakers. The first day will be a workshop (which can be attended separately) on such topics as: How does an analyst determine the key issues to examine; establish ongoing relationships with decision-makers and become an invaluable resource; analyze data from a policy perspective; and present information effectively to policymakers?

This theme will be continued with a panel on Decision Support for Corrections Planning and a hands on demonstration of the latest technologies available for information systems in criminal justice. Other sessions will focus on the status of the UCR redesign, OBTS, and the release and publication of state Data by BJS.

The meeting is being held September 9-12, 1986 at the Holiday Inn Center City in Philadelphia, PA. For further information, contact Adele Ellis at CJSA, Suite 606, 444 North Capitol Street, NW, Washington, DC (202/347-4608).

NCCD Workshop to be Held

The National Council on Crime and Delinquency will hold a two day workshop entitled "Advanced Correctional Population Projection Methods," to be held August 7th and 8th in San Francisco, CA. The workshop will include lectures and demonstrations about various aspects of "Monte Carlo" projection techniques for prison, parole, probation, jail, and juvenile correctional systems. Computer simulation models already being used in seven states will be demonstrated.

The workshop will be designed for correctional and legislative analysts conducting population projections and simulations of proposed legislation/administration policies. A registration fee of $250 is required. For further information, contact James Austin, Director of Research, NCDD, 77 Maiden Lane, San Francisco, CA, 94108. (415) 956-5651.

IMPORTANT NOTICE Audio Visual Needs for the 1986 Annual Meeting

This year limited audio visual services will be available without charge to presenters. The Society pays a local company for the equipment with the expectation that the cost will be covered by conference registration fees. If requests are excessive, the conference budget will go into deficit, ultimately requiring higher registration fees or increased membership dues. This year the daily cost for one overhead projector and screen or one 35 mm carousel and screen will be $60.00 per user per session. The charges to the Society can mount very fast. Please request these items only if necessary. Since rental of VHS and Beta Max video equipment (player, 19" t.v. and projection cart) is $120.00 per user/per session, the Society will not be able to pay for these and we regret that presenters will have to assume the cost of this equipment. If you have specific questions about audio visual equipment feel free to contact the program chair, Barbara Raffel Price, at (212) 489-3968.

COSSA Guide to Federal Funding Published

The Consortium of Social Science Associations, of which the ASC is an affiliate, has put together the first comprehensive Guide to Federal Funding for Social Scientists, published by the Russell Sage Foundation. The Guide describes over 300 federal programs, including funding priorities, application deadlines, and examples of funded research. According to the June 6 COSSA Washington Update, "The Guide is unique for more than its scope . . . COSSA staff met with more than 70 agency directors and research managers to produce analytical program descriptions carefully tailored for the greatest possible relevance to the concerns of social and behavioral scientists."

The 512-page volume will be available to members of the ASC at $14.95, which represents a 25% discount off the list price. For this special discount price, please indicate membership in the ASC when ordering. Send orders to COSSA, Attn: Order Dept., 1200 17th Street NW, Suite 520, Washington, D.C. 20036.

AROUND THE ASC

Arthur Claggett has been promoted to Professor Emeritus of the Department of Sociology at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, Texas. Professor Claggett joined the university in 1968. He is currently on the editorial board of the Quarterly Journal of Ideology.

Robert Regoli has become the twenty-fourth President of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences; Tom Barker is now first Vice-President and President-Elect. Other ASC members who received recognition at the March meeting of the ACJS include John Snortum, co-recipient of the Anderson Outstanding Paper, Kip Schlegel, recipient of the Anderson Outstanding Student Paper Award, and William Chambliss, recipient of the Bruce Smith, Sr. Award, and Timothy Bynum, winner of the Academy Fellow Award.

Congratulations are also due Harold Pepinsky and Paul Jesilow, winners of the ACJS 1986 Outstanding Book Award. Myths That Cause Crime is described by David Friedrichs, chair of the ACJS Awards Committee as follows: "Vividly articulates an alternative way of thinking about criminal justice policy, and provides an imaginative vision of a way out of the current impasse in effectively and humanely responding to the problems of crime."

Kevin Wright has been awarded a Kellogg Foundation Fellowship. Professor Wright is director of the Center for Education and Social Research, and coordinator of the criminal justice program at SUNY-Binghamton. Wright was chosen from among 791 applicants. He is author of The Great American Crime Myth (1985) among other works. Wright intends to use the fellowship to study politically-motivated violence, which he views as a "real threat to people throughout the world."

Donal E. J. Mac Namara, past president of the ASC and Emeritus Distinguished Professor of Criminal Justice at John Jay, is spending the summer in Tyler, Texas as a Windsor-Richardson Summer Scholar at the University of Texas at Tyler. Other Summer Scholars include Eugene Rostow and Edward Teller.

EDWARD SAGARIN A Colleague's Tribute

Edward Sagarin, a past president of the American Society of Criminology and a former editor-in-chief of CRIMINOLOGY: An Interdisciplinary Journal, was called to his eternal reward on June 10th, 1986.

As a criminologist, I regret the loss of one who for more than three decades has contributed prolifically to the literature of our field and more importantly to our understanding of the deviant and the criminal . . . and, he would add, of the pathologies in our society which are such significant factors in the etiology of crime and delinquency. Perhaps however his major contribution has been the rigorous preparation he has given a whole generation of criminological and sociological researchers, scholars and, above all, teachers in our discipline . . . for he himself was above all else a master teacher, devoted to his students but equally devoted to high standards of scholarship and to a humane but not maudlin understanding of those who for whatever reason find themselves unable or unwilling to live by society's laws.

Edward Sagarin and I did not always agree . . . he was essentially a Marxist, a critical criminologist more likely to condemn those who make our laws rather than those who break them, more likely to see our society as exploitative rather than as one of opportunity, to emphasize its pathologies rather than its demonstrated concern for those less capable of competing, less likely to survive.

But it is neither as a criminologist nor as a Marxist that I will keep his memory green in my heart for whatever days or years are allotted me in the great plan of the Almighty . . . it is as a friend that I will remember Edward Sagarin, a friend of more than thirty years . . . a friend with whom I have published three books and many articles (and with whom I have only very recently completed the final draft of Precocious Criminality: Felons Before Puberty), a friend with whom I have shared many meals, engaged in sometimes ferocious dialogue, discovered and developed budding talents in our field, one who was as at home in my house as I was in his — one with whom I have shared confidences not even to be entrusted to those who share my blood.

To Gertrude, whose love and care added many years and untold happiness to Ed's sojourn in this vale of tears, to his son Fred, and to his grandchildren, sister and family, I extend my sincere sympathy and express the hope that Ed has found in whatever afterlife there be the contentment, the peace he has so richly earned.

Donal E. J. Mac Namara

A Note from Joseph Weis CRIMINOLOGY UPDATE and CALL FOR PAPERS

The publication of Volume 23, No. 1 of CRIMINOLOGY signaled many changes — a new editor, publisher, printer, and journal format. At that time I declared the intent to get CRIMINOLOGY back on schedule with Volume 24. Because of the submission of many fine papers, the additional support of The American Society of Criminology that is necessary to publish a journal in-house, and the hard work of my editorial staff, peer reviews, and associate editors, that intent will come to fruition with the scheduled publication of Volume 24, No. 1 this summer. I would like to thank everyone who has helped make this possible.

In order to stay on schedule for subsequent issues, while maintaining high publication standards, CRIMINOLOGY needs to receive your work. Hopefully, the official journal of The American Society of Criminology will be seen by you as the primary outlet for the publication of your best scholarship. I encourage you to support CRIMINOLOGY, by submitting your work for publication consideration. The quality and success of the journal depend on the concerted efforts of all members of The American Society of Criminology. Together we can continue to produce the leading journal in the field.

I look forward to working with you.

Joseph G. Weis, Editor

JEAN GENET — 1910-1986 Requiescat In Pace

It is unusual indeed for a criminological periodical to publish an obituary much less a eulogy of a criminal . . . but Jean Genet was an exceptional criminal. Certainly Genet was no Robin Hood nor yet a Ned Kelly ('who robbed the rich and fed the poor and never harmed a lady'). He was instead by his own admission (corroborated by the official records) a criminopath, psychopath, sociopath who violated every social, religious, moral, legal and ethical tenet . . . one who gloried in his criminality . . . one to whom evil was the greatest good because "it is nothingness expressed in its purest form." Genet wrote:

*"I want to sing murder
For I love the murderers.
To sing it plainly,
Without pretending that
I want to be redeemed through it.
Though I do yearn for redemption,
I would like to kill."*

Genet has been acclaimed as a memoirist, novelist, poet and dramatist . . . but it is not for his literary skills that The Criminologist takes note of his oeuvre and his passing . . . but rather to call to the attention of academic criminologists, law-abiding, middle-class and all too frequently judgemental, a body of work from which they might well acquire insights as to the criminal personality more realistic (perhaps more 'street-smart') than from the largely ghost-written apologiae of lesser offenders, the voyeur (outsider) observations of Dostoevsky, Gide, Hugo or even Capote, or the the multi-volume tirade against the Gulag by ex-prisoner of conscience Solshenitzyn . . . or from the works of our academic brothers on living in prison, the prison community, sex in prison, psychological survival, society of captives and accomplices to the crime.

First institutionalized as a delinquent at ten, Genet spent much of the next quarter-century in jail or prison . . . and it was in prison that he wrote Notre Dame des Fleurs, Miracle de la Rose, and much of Journal du Voleur (as well as essays, poems and copious notes for later works.

THE FENCE In the Shadow of Two Worlds

Darrell J. Steffensmeier
Pennsylvania State University

This colorful sociological study takes us on a journey through the dark side of American life as The Fence (alias "Sam Goodman") recounts his experiences as a dealer in stolen goods. An important contribution to the sparse literature on fencing, Sam's history serves as a model for understanding the role fences play in today's society and provides a straightforward and colorful analysis of underground life.

"A model for case study research and a significant contribution to criminological knowledge about a major criminal role."

ORGANIZED CRIME A Global Perspective

Edited by Robert J. Kelly
City University of New York

The "Black Hand" and the Neapolitan "Camorra," the "Yakuza" of Japan, the notorious "Tongs" of New York and San Francisco—organized crime wears a variety of guises throughout the world. A first in the study of organized crime, this collection of original essays by leading scholars and criminologists presents the subject as a global phenomenon. The essays deal with the origins of organized crime; the economic, social, and cultural factors that affect its rise, spread, and control; and the role of secrecy among law enforcement and underworld groups.

"Far-ranging and informative. . . Academics, law enforcement planners, and the public at large will find this valuable contribution helpful in broadening our understanding of a persistent and insidious threat."

Patrick V. Murphy,

former New York City Police Commissioner

Already acclaimed by Sartre, Cocteau, Celine and Claudel, and lionized by the left-liberal intellectuals not only of France but also of other continental countries and America, Genet, though his writings were earning him a good income, continued his life in crime and in the late forties was saved from a life sentence as an habitual offender only by the organized intervention of the literary and Socialist elite. Jean Paul Sartre, in fact, published a hagiographic biography, Saint Genet: Comedien et Martyr, comparing him to St. Teresa of Avila.

Jean Genet murdered and raped, sodomized and pimped, assaulted and stole . . . from young and old, from rich to poor, from friends and from lovers . . . and, as for honor among thieves, he not only regularly victimized his fellow criminals and prisoners but also on occasion informed on them to the French police (among whom he had oddly enough a number of admirers . . . it was indeed a French police official who first introduced me to Genet in the 'fifties'). Genet was by no means an extrovert or even ordinarily personable and pleasant. Shy and arrogant by turns, sulky, sullen, suspicious, often inaccessible (sometimes literally), he could at other times become quite boastful and confiding about his life, his crimes, his philosophy, expanding on autobiographical incidents already described in his writings. Never, however, did he alibi, excuse, or express regret . . . and I would doubt that he repented on his death-bed.

Jean Genet, saint and sinner, man and homosexual, outcast and thief, ideologue, revolutionary, aristocrat of evil, subverter of beauty — may you at long last rest in peace.

New Criminal Justice Degrees at the University of Texas at Arlington

Criminal justice majors at the University of Texas at Arlington will find a new look to the program when they return to campus this fall. Since 1971, both the undergraduate and graduate programs have been in UTA's Institute of Urban Studies. This year they have been moved to the College of Liberal Arts, where criminal justice will be a free-standing program with a Director responsible to the Dean of Liberal Arts. There continues to be a "core" faculty, representing earned doctorates in administration, political science, psychology, and social work and, at the undergraduate level, also a J.D.

At the undergraduate level, courses central to the degree are drawn from criminal justice and the departments of political science, psychology, social work, and sociology, with opportunities for both concentration and free electives. At the graduate level, students may select from three options: coursework and thesis, coursework and internship, and coursework only. Beyond the required courses, students may select courses from a wide variety of subject areas.

The result is a program which (1) provides the student with an opportunity to interact with a broad spectrum of the University faculty, (2) affords different perspectives of the criminal justice system and the persons involved in it, and (3) allows the student to gain the knowledge specifically appropriate to working in that system.
