HIGHLIGHTS OF THE 1997 ASC ANNUAL MEETING - SAN DIEGO

Debra A. Curran, Program Chair
Washington State University

The Program Committee has been hard at work preparing an exciting and diverse set of sessions for the 1997 Annual Meeting of the American Society of Criminology that we are pleased to present to you here. The meetings will be held November 19 - 22 at the beautiful Sheraton San Diego Hotel & Marina. The property is located on San Diego Bay a short distance from downtown and minutes from the airport. All guest rooms have spectacular views of the Bay, bridges and boats, and the hotel facilities include several pools, tennis courts, and a health club. The true challenge is going to be getting all of you inside to attend the more than 460 sessions we have planned.

In keeping with President Jim Short's theme, "Crossing Boundaries and Building Bridges: The Discipline and the Profession of Criminology," we have organized plenary sessions, panel sessions, author-meets-critic sessions, student sessions, roundtable sessions, and we are still accepting submissions for our new concept of table sessions. Among the panels are several special highlighted sessions (noted in the preliminary program) organized by ASC Divisions, program committee area chairs, and individuals enlisted by the President. In addition, we will have an informal plenary "luncheon with the mentors," featuring several prominent scholars who have mentored all of us in one way or another. This will be a delightful opportunity to meet these mentors, hear a few words from them about their roots in criminology, and have folks in the audience contribute statements and questions about the mentors, as well as introduce many of you whom they have mentored. The idea is to identify lineages within criminology and have a little fun doing it.

As usual, we have expanded to fill all of the meeting space available to us. Although our hotel has two towers, all plenary and panel sessions will be held in the East Tower. Every room, nook, and cranny will be used. The West Tower has relatively few meeting rooms and they will be reserved for special functions of ASC Divisions and non-ASC sponsored meetings and receptions.

As has become the custom, we will have major buffet receptions every evening, followed by various entertaining events like the annual Minority Fellowship Dance and the President's Reception for Students. By necessity, sessions will begin at 8:00 am Wednesday, November 19 and run through Saturday afternoon, November 22. Everyone should plan to be in attendance the entire time, first because you won't want to miss any of the events, which are distributed across all days and times of the day regardless of theme or topic, and second because we are unable to adapt the program to meet individuals' personal time or day preferences. The city of San Diego also offers many sights and attractions for you, your family, and friends to take advantage of before and after the meetings. Nearby are wonderful restaurants, great shopping, excellent golf and tennis opportunities, Sea World, the San Diego Zoo, and on and on. Our able local arrangements committee is putting together a package of tours and information for your professional and personal enjoyment.

We have tried diligently to avoid presenter and topic conflicts, but we know some may still exist. In part, this is because we have not yet applied the "two appearance" rule (pertaining to chairs, presenters, and discussants, but not co-authors) that the ASC has for annual meetings. Given the time and space constraints we are under, we will be adjusting the program in the coming months to implement the two appearance rule and to correct errors in this preliminary program. Please contact me via email (curran@wsu.edu) or FAX (509/335-6677) to identify errors that you find.

Now I suggest you peruse the enclosed preliminary program. I guarantee each of you will find many sessions and events of interest and that you, like I, will look forward to seeing them presented in San Diego. If you have not yet made your hotel reservations please do so now. Finally, I want very much to thank the 58 members of the 1997 Program Committee for their hard work, diligence, and good humor throughout the submission and organizational phase of this grueling but rewarding process. Without them the enclosed pages of the preliminary program would be blank.

AROUND THE ASC

THE ASC E-MAIL MENTORING PROGRAM

!!!! NEW CONTACT INFORMATION!!!!

The ASC mentoring program was invented in 1993, with the purpose being to provide mentors to ASC students who have questions about career choices, research and theoretical issues, etc. By now, the ASC e-mail mentoring program has amassed a healthy number of mentors for ASC students to talk to. We have a variety of mentors of all ages, races and ethnicities, and nationalities. We also have areas of specializations well represented as well as work roles (university faculty, strictly research, and practitioners).

These very willing and very capable mentors have volunteered to advise ASC students. SO USE THEM!

The ASC e-mail mentoring program is now available on the web. That means: ASC students can now be mentored by faculty, researchers, and administrators outside their own universities through the ASC homepage. All you do need to do is hunt for a likely mentor, hit the e-mail address, and you are hotlinked to that mentor right away. The address is: <http://sun.soci.niu.edu/~ascmentr>

MENTORS. Non-students (faculty, researchers, practitioners, administrators) can sign up to be mentors and be immediately placed on the web site.

Now, because we have the web site, you can sign up anytime to be mentors, and I'll just add you to the list. As soon as you tell me that you want to be a mentor to ASC students, you are. Just send me the following information: Your name, office or home address, e-mail address, areas of specialization within criminology (such as, critical theory, qualitative methodology, biocriminology, etc.), and demographic traits (age, gender, and race-ethnicity).

MENTOR OF THE YEAR AWARD. The ASC Student Affairs Committee will give this award to the person nominated as the best e-mail mentor. Some lucky mentor will receive a very nice plaque honoring her or him as the mentor of the year, which is presented at the ASC Presidential Reception.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Contemporary Issues in Criminal Justice

Professor Rita Simon and graduate student Louise van der Does are soliciting proposals for chapters to include in a book on how today's young scholars would solve our country's crime problems. Graduate students and young professionals are invited to submit proposals (3-4 p. minimum) on how to tackle a crime problem. We are especially interested in proposals addressing capital punishment, chain gangs, 3 strike laws, gun control, infanticide, terrorism/militia movement, interpersonal violence, and elite crime. Please submit proposals by December 31, 1997, to:

1997 ANNUAL MEETING ANNOUNCEMENTS

TRAVEL ARRANGEMENTS TO SAN DIEGO

I would like to encourage all members of ASC to use the travel services available through Conventions in America (see page 32 for further information) when you arrange your trip to San Diego for this year's meeting. You will save money and you will find that the staff at Conventions is very helpful and knowledgeable. Even if you must use an alternative travel agent or want to book yourself, contact Conventions first to find out how your booking can be credited to ASC's account. Each flight booked helps the American Society of Criminology provide better services for its members.

Thank you

Hugh D. Barlow
Travel Arrangements Coordinator

GRADUATE SCHOOL INFORMATION EXCHANGE

All Students Welcomed!

The American Society of Criminology will again be hosting the Graduate School Information Exchange at the Annual Meeting in San Diego, California. A schedule of the schools participating in the Exchange will be published in the ASC Proceedings. Review the schedule and make plans to visit with the representative(s) from the program(s) that interest you. Graduate Bulletins, financial aid information and other materials are available for students to review. Stop by and gather information regarding your choice doctoral programs. Some Masters programs also have information available. All materials are displayed with the intent that students will take the information they find interesting.

NEWS FROM THE DIVISIONS

DIVISION ON CRITICAL CRIMINOLOGY

The Division of Critical Criminology is pleased to announce the appointment of a new editorial collective for the division's newsletter, The Critical Criminologist. The new collective (in alphabetical order) is comprised of:

Greg Barak, Eastern Michigan University
Charisse Coston, University of North Carolina at Charlotte
Stuart Henry, Eastern Michigan University
Paul Leighton, Eastern Michigan University

The new collective brings both breadth and experience to the task of making The Critical Criminologist a lively forum for critical thinking in criminology, and a communication vehicle for the Division.

DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL CRIMINOLOGY

CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

The Division of International Criminology Nominations Committee is inviting nominations (including self-nominations) for the election slate of DIC officers. Positions for election include President, Secretary-Treasurer, and three Advisory Board members.

To assure that your nomination gets full consideration by the Committee, please include a resume summary of one or two paragraphs. Please send your nominations no later than August 15 to the:

Chair of the DIC Nominations Committee
Dr. Ken Polk
Criminology Department
University of Melbourne
Parkville, Victoria 3052
+61 3 9349 4259 Fax
E-mail: Ken_Polk.criminology@muwaye.unimelb.edu.au

REMINDER!!!!

A number of last year's DIC members have not yet renewed their membership in the Division. We do need your dues ($10) in order to be able to continue our activities (Newsletter, International Scholar and Book Award, and so on). Please, continue your support of the Division. We also invite new members to join. If you already renewed your ASC membership, all it takes is an extra $10 check indicating "DIC dues" sent to:

DIVISION ON PEOPLE OF COLOR AND CRIME

GOALS AND STRUCTURE

At the November 1996 meeting of the Society, the Division on People of Color and Crime (DPCC) held its second annual meeting and celebrated its first Anniversary. We are pleased to report that enthusiasm still rings high for the activities, promises, and goals of DPCC. For those who are not familiar with the division, its general purposes include to: facilitate and encourage research and theory development about issues related to people of color and crime; encourage interaction among academic, research, practitioner, and policy-making sectors in the hope of furthering understanding of issues related to race, crime, and criminal justice; offer mentoring and support for graduate students and junior faculty in the field to enhance the chances of their success in gaining advanced degrees and tenure respectively; and, enhance participation of people of color in ASC and raising awareness of concerns regarding racial diversity among members of ASC.

Although the specific agenda of the Division is a work in progress, we have begun to work toward the above goals. For example, at the annual meeting our featured speaker for our Division luncheon was Jeremy Travis of the National Institute of Justice, who spoke with us about grant opportunities and ways to enhance the chances of funding. Also, our Co-chairs, along with the Chairs of the other divisions met with Chair-elect Margaret Zahn to discuss the roles and participation of divisions in ASC and the annual meeting. For the upcoming meeting, we have planned sessions on the politics of urban violence, women in criminal justice research, and fellowship and grant opportunities within the federal sector. Our annual luncheon will be held on Saturday, November 22. Please note the session times and speakers in the preliminary program.

The Division's structure is evolving. Currently, we rely upon a steering committee composed of the Division's acting Co-Chairs (Julius Debro, University of Washington and Ruth Peterson, Ohio State University), and the Chairs of Division Committees. During the fall, we expect to elect officers for the next year, including offices of the Chairperson, Vice-Chairperson, Secretary, and Newsletter Editor.

A COUPLE OF INVITATIONS

DPCC invites all members of ASC to join the Division and help us promote quality research and policy-making on issues of race/ethnicity, crime and criminal justice, an area of wide interest among ASC participants. To do so, contact Sarah Hall, American Society of Criminology, 1314 Kinnear Road—Suite 214, Columbus, OH 43212.

We extend an invitation to members of the DPCC and those who join to play an active role in the Division. You may run for office, volunteer for Division Committees, provide Division officers with ideas about how to advance the goals of DPCC. There are many ways that you can contribute. Your advice and expertise are the keys to our success. Please write, call or e-mail Julius or Ruth regarding your ideas and desires about participation in the Division:

A NOTE OF THANKS

Thanks to all of you who have joined the division, worked to get the Division off the ground, and contributed to our meetings and efforts so far. The Division is especially indebted to Chinita Heard for her dedication, perseverance, and leadership in getting the division started and charting its early history.

DIVISION ON WOMEN AND CRIME

1997 STUDENT PAPER COMPETITION

The Division on Women and Crime announces its 1997 Student Paper Competition, which is intended to encourage excellent student writing on matters of feminist scholarship, gender issues or about women as offenders, victims or professionals.

The Division invites all eligible students to submit papers in accordance with the following guidelines:

Eligibility: Any student currently enrolled in school at the undergraduate or graduate level at the time of the submission is eligible to enter. Paper Specifications: Papers must be about or related to feminist scholarship, gender issues or women as offenders, victims or professionals. Papers must be no longer than 7500 words (30 pages) with an acceptable referencing format such as APA or MLA. Papers must contain an abstract of 100 words, be typed double-spaced, and submitted on 8 1/2 by 11 inch paper. Three copies of the paper must be submitted along with verification of current student status. Papers by multiple authors are acceptable as long as all authors are students. Judging: The committee will judge papers based on significance of the topic, conceptualization, and clarity of the writing. Award: The winner will be presented with a $500 cash award at the Division on Women and Crime annual meeting at ASC. In cases where there are multiple winners, the award will be divided among the recipients. The winner(s) will be notified in writing by the committee prior to the annual meeting. The Committee reserves the right to give two awards or no award, if deemed necessary. Deadline: Three copies of the paper must be received by the contact person for the Award Committee no later than September 30, 1997.

BOOK REVIEWS

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Joanne BELKNAP, author. The Invisible Woman: Gender, Crime and Justice. Jody Miller, reviewer.
 Sue MAHAN, author. Crack Cocaine, Crime and Women. Part Four of the Drugs, Health and Social Policy Series.
 Phoebe Morgan Stambaugh, reviewer.

Joanne BELKNAP, The Invisible Woman: Gender, Crime and Justice. Belmont, CA: Wadsworth Publishing Company. 1996. 290 pages.

In the tradition of a number of feminist texts before it, Joanne Belknap's The Invisible Woman provides a detailed overview of women's experiences as criminal offenders, victims, and workers in the crime-processing system. The book begins with an orienting discussion of the emergence of gender as an issue of concern within the field of criminology, including topics such as the distinction between sex and gender, definitions of feminism, and diversity among women. Part II provides a review of theory and research regarding female offenders, and includes a critique of traditional theories of crime, an overview of the frequency and nature of female offending, and discussions of their criminal justice processing.

The third section documents women's experiences with male violence, including discussions of images of female victims, sexual victimization, and woman battering. Part IV discusses women workers, with a chapter that provides an overview of women's movement into the workforce in general, and a chapter specific to women in crime-processing professions. Finally, the book concludes by highlighting several recent developments in feminist theories of crime, and suggests ways to effect change in regard to women offenders, victims and workers in criminal justice.

Perhaps the most significant contribution Belknap's book makes is that it provides scholars with a comprehensive source of references concerning research on women, crime and justice. (Though she does not include the work of Lisa Maher, which I believe is some of the most important contemporary feminist scholarship in criminology.) In contrast with its title and basic orientation, The Invisible Woman illustrates the breadth of recent research on topics related to gender, crime and justice.

Reading this book provided me with the opportunity to ponder a number of significant issues for feminist criminology. While recognizing that the book is mainly marketed as an undergraduate text, I was reminded that there are larger trends we need to address in order to continue to strengthen and develop our scholarship. The first I have already alluded to—that is the necessity for feminist criminologists to write in a forward-looking manner. As Belknap's bibliography attests, we have made tremendous inroads in our scholarship in the last two decades, and we have also made significant inroads in raising social consciousness—around issues of violence against women in particular. We should not ignore the obstacles we continue to face in these regards, or how historical constructions of gender have shaped contemporary problems. However, the time has come to embrace our own agency and credit ourselves for the progress we've made. For instance, Belknap's discussion of the contemporary feminist theories of such scholars as Kathleen Daly and James Messerschmidt could have led and informed the framework of the book, rather than being relegated to the conclusion.

Recognizing the significance of our contributions is important. In addition, however, feminist researchers need to strive for more rigorous scholarship. This includes being willing to critically assess the research that has been done (including research that supports our agendas), and to accept the challenge of taking on difficult issues in feminist ways. Belknap does a wonderful job of providing information on a multitude of studies, but is perhaps weakest in providing careful interpretations or explanations on why they are often at odds with each other, or whether these studies differ in their accuracy and generalizability. I am not suggesting that we need to adhere to rigid positivistic approaches, but we should hold our work up to rigorous standards of evaluation and careful interpretation.

There is no doubt that a teaching tool to which students react well is the presentation of dichotomies. These have dominated feminist criminology in the past, and for that reason are important parts of the literature review here: liberation versus victimization, chivalry versus equal treatment versus 'evil' woman theses, and language suggestive of dichotomous gender differences. However, in a forward looking approach, we need to be willing to deal with the social worlds of women's offending and crime-processing in all of their complexities, and this means moving beyond narrow dichotomous approaches.

In this regard, my final point is one that a number of feminist scholars have vigorously argued in recent years. We need to deal more effectively with the integration of race, class and gender issues in our research and theory. To her credit, Belknap makes a serious attempt to do so, but is not fully successful. Brief discussions of African American women at the end of a section, or presenting different rates of offending and victimization by race are the first steps, not the final ones. Curiously, the term "Anglo" is used instead of white, an inaccurate designation given that many white Americans and Canadians are not of Anglo descent.

To conclude, let me reiterate that The Invisible Woman makes an important contribution, as a comprehensive reference of the large body of research that feminist criminologists have produced in the last two decades.

Sue Mahan. Crack Cocaine, Crime and Women. Part Four of the Drugs, Health and Social Policy Series. Thousand Oaks, California. Sage Publications. 95 pages.

This book provides a succinct analysis of women's place within the crack cocaine crisis. Few books stay on task as well as this one does. Mahan sets reasonable goals for the book and then achieves them. She makes no promise to solve the crack cocaine problem; rather, she invites her readers to take a step back from politically expedient and media constructed definitions of the crack panic and from that distance, re-examine it.

In 95 thoughtful pages, Mahan takes us on a tour of "Crackworld," introduces us to the women who live there, and then exposes us to ways in which the criminalization of crack and treatment approaches deleteriously affect crack moms and their children. Drawing upon survey, interview, and legal research data collected over a 10 year period, Mahan creatively uses the case study method to analyze the crack problem at the individual, legal, and community level.

In the first chapter, for example, Mahan uses interviews with 17 recovering crack addicts to describe Crackworld, the women who reside there, and the kind of lives they lead. To illustrate her points, Mahan provides the story of "S", a 28 year old "rock star" turned "rock monster." In the next chapter, Mahan traces the criminalization history of crack cocaine. She looks at both the impetus for and impact of the "get tough" policies of the 1980's and examines how law is used to punish crack moms for their dependencies. Mahan presents Jennifer Johnson's (one of the first "crack moms" to be prosecuted for delivering cocaine to her unborn child) story to show the negative impact that criminalization has on crack addicted women and their children. The third chapter takes a despairing look at the treatment modalities currently available to crack using women. This chapter talks frankly about how current treatment approaches ignore the needs of women. Her case study of the tragically brief career of Hope House, a progressive treatment program, breaths life into the complexity of the treatment issues and the difficulties involved in women's detoxification and recovery.

Mahan convincingly argues that to understand the crack phenomena, we must first come to terms with women's role within it. Thus, within each dimension and at each level of analysis she places women at the center of her study and makes the case that women are not peripheral, but rather are central characters in the crack cocaine story. For example, she notes that rates of crack cocaine dependency are considerably higher among women than among men. She explains how in Crackworld, women depend upon men for money and therefore for their drugs. On the streets, prostitutes sell their bodies for drug money. In crack houses, crack whores exchange sex for drugs, and in the process, endure beatings, assaults, and humiliating abuse.

Mahan's portrait of women crack users as dependent upon men, sex, and drugs then sets the stage for understanding the emergence of crack moms and crack babies and their treatment in the criminal justice system. With crack use comes coerced and often unprotected sex which in turn increases the risk of unwanted pregnancy. In addition, the crack lifestyle puts those pregnancies at risk. While the number of crack babies is relatively small, Mahan notes that caring for them has "swamped every system." Public revulsion has prompted tough prosecution of crack moms for such crimes as "fetal abuse," "delivery of a controlled substance to a minor," manslaughter (for stillbirths) and even involuntary commitment during pregnancy.

Observing the criminal justice system's response, Mahan makes an important point. The "get tough" approach both individualizes this social problem and blames those individuals for being a part of it. Thus, in the legal arena, as in Crackworld, women addicts are vilified for their dependencies, and then punished for their powerlessness to overcome them.

Unfortunately for crack moms and their babies, Mahan argues that treatment programs offer little hope for empowerment. Lack of consideration of the social and familial context of these women's problems has resulted in the failure of most pregnant women and mothers to successfully recover from crack addiction. The Hope House story is a shocking example of the complexity of the treatment problem. Mahan reports that within months after Hope House opened its doors, women who resided there were videotaped smoking crack within the shelter itself. Upon reorganization, the House opened a second time, only to be shut down again due to a lack of funds.

Wisely, Mahan does not attempt to solve the crack problem, but rather to reframe it. Mahan argues that the crack phenomena is not an aberration in U.S. society but more accurately a reflection of it. Thus, in Crackworld, as in society at large, the vulnerabilities of these dependent women are exploited, the women are then vilified and punished for their victimization. In crack world, only crack babies have less control over their lives than do crack whores.

My only criticism of the book is that Mahan makes her case so well that there is little room left for hope. The case studies illustrate without doubt that the crack crisis is more complicated with far more implications than the public would like to believe. While I agree with Mahan that larger economic and social forces structure the crack panic, she offers little insight into how individuals can make a difference. While the book may indeed raise consciousness and inspire empathy, readers may become paralyzed by the scope and complexity of the issue. Given that the book is so short, I would have appreciated an additional chapter or two dedicated to discussion of empowerment strategies at the individual, community and legal level.

Sadly, Mahan's analysis is nothing new to criminologists or to feminists, but these groups are not the book's primary audiences. Mahan does speak clearly and intelligently to her intended audience, e.g. social workers, criminal justice authorities and treatment providers. Because it is accessible, brief and affordable, the book would be a useful text for undergraduate courses about women in the criminal justice system, the construction of social problems, or about illegal drug use.

Dominican University. The Department of Sociology announces its extended search for a renewable, non-tenure track position for Fall, 1998 at the assistant professor level, with the possibility of eventual conversion to tenure track. The candidate will be expected to develop and implement a new criminology major within the existing sociology program. Applicants should demonstrate broad teaching competence in sociology, but with special emphasis in the areas of criminology and related fields, and must be able to teach a basic undergraduate research methods course. By the time of appointment in Fall, 1998, applicants should have a completed Ph.D. in sociology, with a specialization in criminology or a related field, teaching experience, and a primary commitment to undergraduate education and advising. The University is making a concerted effort to increase the racial diversity of its existing faculty and minorities are encouraged to apply. Dominican University, located in a near west suburb of Chicago, is a comprehensive, liberal arts institution with programs that display a career focus. It consists of an undergraduate College of Arts and Sciences, a Graduate School of Library and Information Science, a School of Business and a School of Education. The Department of Sociology, within the College of Arts and Sciences, offers a sociology major and minor, with specializations in social analysis, social services, and international development. It also provides support, through its course offerings, to programs in gerontology, and early, elementary and secondary education, as well as to the general education requirements of the undergraduate curriculum. Consistent with the University mission, the Sociology Department strongly emphasizes a progressive, social justice orientation in all of its curricula and academic programming. Although highest priority is given to teaching excellence, all full-time university faculty are supported by a favorable policy on travel funding for academic conference participation. Salary includes full benefits and TIAA-CREF. Interested applicants must submit a letter describing their qualifications, a vita, evaluations of teaching effectiveness, sample course syllabi or descriptions, and three letters of recommendation to: Janice Monti-Belkaoui, Ph.D., Chair, Department of Sociology, Rosary College of Arts and Sciences, Dominican University, 7900 West Division St., River Forest, IL 60305. The new deadline for completed applications is November 1, 1997. Candidates who submitted completed applications prior to the original application deadline will remain in the pool unless they indicate otherwise. Dominican University is an equal opportunity employer.

University of Nebraska at Omaha. (Search Extended) The Department of Criminal Justice invites applications and nominations for the position of Professor and Chair beginning with the fall semester of 1998. A January 1998 start date also is possible. The individual appointed to the position will be responsible for undergraduate and graduate teaching, research, community service, and departmental administration. A Ph.D. in criminal justice or a related field or a Ph.D./J.D. is required. A record of research and publication appropriate for appointment at the rank of full professor is required. A record of administrative effectiveness or a demonstrated high promise of leadership is also required. All areas of specialization will be considered. The Department of Criminal Justice has twenty-one faculty members and a complement of staff and graduate assistants on the Omaha and Lincoln campuses. The department offers a Bachelor of Science, Master of Science, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy in Criminal Justice. The Bachelor of Science degree is offered in its entirety on both the Omaha and Lincoln campuses. The University of Nebraska at Omaha (UNO) is located in Nebraska's largest metropolitan area with a population of more than 650,000 people. UNO serves approximately 15,000 students, having over 100 undergraduate and 60 graduate programs. Persons interested in this position should send letter of application, curriculum vitae, and names of three references to: David Hinton, Dean, College of Public Affairs and Community Service, University of Nebraska at Omaha, Omaha, NE 68182-0145. The review of applications and nominations has commenced and will continue until the position is filled. Salary is negotiable commensurate with qualifications. The University of Nebraska at Omaha is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer: minorities, women, handicapped, and Vietnam-Era veterans are encouraged to apply.

ACJS Solicits New Space for National Office

The Executive Board of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences is soliciting competitive bids for housing its national office. Qualified bidders include criminal justice-related organizations, agencies, associations, and institutions of higher education.

In the past, ACJS has leased office space. At this juncture, however, the Academy intends to consider all options, including leasing or purchasing property/space.

The new arrangement, whatever its nature, will be effective July 1, 1998. If the arrangement involves a lease and services from a host institution, or only services from a host institution, an initial contract for five (5) years will be executed. The contract will include provisions for subsequent renewals as well as cancellation should either party fail to fulfill agreed upon responsibilities.

Among the minimal expectations are: (1) 1,500 square feet of office space appropriately configured; (2) convenient postal and printing services; (3) multi-line telephone service; (4) reliable Internet access with home page capability; and (5) payroll and financial services.

Generally, support from the host institution over and above minimum expectations is essential to the successful operation of the national office and of ACJS.

For an information and application packet, interested parties should contact the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences, Northern Kentucky University, 402 Nunn Hall, Highland Heights, KY 41099; (800) 757-ACJS; (606) 572-5634; (606) 572-6665 (fax).

The timetable for considering and acting upon applications will be as follows:

Application available:	April 1, 1997
Applications due:	August 1, 1997
Decision by:	January 1, 1998
Contract begins:	July 1, 1998
