The Centre of Criminology at the University of Toronto

Rosemary Gartner
Director, and Professor of Sociology
University of Toronto

What do Disney World, the Just Desserts Cafe, and Alcatraz have in common? How are "Charlie's Angels", "The Return of Martin Guerre," and The Spice Girls related? How many criminologists does it take to fix a broken window? Those who have spent time at the Centre of Criminology at the University of Toronto may recognize how these questions relate to the Centre's work, activities, and character. As for the rest of you -- I invite you to read on to learn not only the answers but something about one of North America's oldest research and graduate teaching centres devoted to the study of crime, criminality, law, and social regulation.

Background on the Centre of Criminology

The Centre of Criminology was established in 1963 with the mandate to develop the study of crime and criminal justice in Canadian society by way of collaborative, multi- and interdisciplinary efforts. Today, the Centre continues to be guided by the view that criminology is not a discipline, per se, but a field of study "that can and should be tilted with the conceptual and methodological implements of a variety of disciplines" (Ericson and Shearing 1991: 4). In the Centre's research, teaching, policy-advisory and public education roles, this orientation is fundamental and gives the Centre and its work its distinctive character.

The academic backgrounds of the Centre's core and cross-appointed faculty reflect this multidisciplinary orientation. The six core faculty at the Centre (Anthony Doob, Clifford Shearing, Philip Stenning, Carolyn Strange, Mariana Valverde, and Scot Wortley) and the 13 cross-appointed faculty have graduate degrees in law, sociology, history, psychology, psychiatry, political science, and criminology. Our masters and Ph.D. students come from an even more diverse range of undergraduate specializations. And to keep us honest about our multidisciplinaryity, the Centre has a Junior Fellows program through which Ph.D. students from other departments participate in Centre activities and research.

Research at the Centre of Criminology

For over thirty years, the faculty's research has integrated theoretical and practical concerns, by focusing on the institutional processes and structures that constitute crime, law, and justice, and by questioning how security and its breaches have been defined and regulated. Some of this research is published through the Centre's monograph series, which has produced dozens of volumes since John Hogarth's Sentencing as a Human Process and Irvin Waller's Men Released From Prison were released in conjunction with the University of Toronto Press in the early 1970s. Recent publications in this series, which showcase the diversity of the Centre's research, include New Forms of Governance: Theory, Practice, Research, edited by Mariana Valverde; Criminal Justice in the Old World and the New: Essays in Honour of John Beattie, edited by Greg Smith, Allyson May, and Simon Devereaux; and An Exploration of Ontario Residents' Views on Crime and the Criminal Justice System, by Anthony N. Doob, Jane Sprott, Voula Marinos, and Kimberley Varma.

The Centre's research program was characterized almost a decade ago by two of its faculty as aimed at understanding "the struggle over social order, the activity ('legal' or otherwise) that seeks to guarantee social order, and the activity ('legal' or otherwise) that resists the realization of

AROUND THE ASC

MICHAEL R. GOTTFREDSON has been appointed the new Executive Vice Chancellor at the University of California, Irvine, effective July 17, 2000. His academic appointment will be in the Dept. of Criminology, Law and Society in the School of Social Ecology.

CHARLES R. TITTLE. Dean Margaret A. Zahn is pleased to announce that Charles R. Tittle has accepted an appointment as the Goodnight-Glaxo Wellcome Endowed Chair in the Social Sciences at North Carolina State University. Professor Tittle will join the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at NC State in the fall where he will teach, pursue new research initiatives, revise his control balance theory, and write two new books: one on deterrence and the other on subcultures. As the first endowed chair in the social sciences, Professor Tittle will also serve in a leadership role in the university and will work to advance the sociology department's national position.

CHRISTY VISHER has accepted a position as Principal Research Associate at The Urban Institute, Washington, DC, where she will continue her interests in the intersection between research, policy and practice on crime and justice issues. Her office number is 202/261-5593.

this guarantee" (Ericson and Shearing, 1991: 9). This description remains apt and can be illustrated by a quick tour of some of the on-going research projects of core faculty at the Centre.

In a climate of concern over increases in youth violence that is unsubstantiated by evidence, Canadian legislators are considering a new Youth Criminal Justice Act, which would replace the Young Offenders Act of 1984. Tony Doob's current research contributes to these deliberations by examining the principles and purposes that determine the dispositions of young offenders, how punishments in the youth justice system are perceived by the public, and the effects of different social and penal experiences on young people who offend.

Clifford Shearing is currently involved in research on alternative forms of policing in emerging democracies (including South Africa) and elsewhere, and, more generally, on the governance of security. Along with Jennifer Wood, a recent Centre Ph.D., and colleagues in South America, he is beginning a project to develop and implement the transfer of Canadian expertise to community-driven safety programs in Argentina.

Accountability -- of police, prosecutors, and legislators - is a theme that runs through Philip Stenning's work. Much of it focuses on private police powers (symbolic and otherwise) and civilian governance of policing in North America and Europe. Stenning's work also turns a critical eye to the public debates and recent legislation around firearms abuse, availability, and control in Canada, Australia, and New Zealand.

Carolyn Strange examines the cultural dimensions of punishment and the regulation of morality through historical and cultural analyses of, among other things, debates over corporal and capital punishment in Canada and Australia and the interplay of sexological and legal interpretations of sexual deviance. She is currently conducting a comparative study of the transformation of former sites of state punishment into tourist attractions.

In recent work, Mariana Valverde has explored the social and legal technologies of the regulation of alcohol, various conceptualizations of alcoholism, and the forms of rationality associated with it. One of her on-going projects aims to document the process by which the law recognizes, authorizes, and at times demands the exercise of types of knowledge that are largely outside the purview of experts.

Along with work on social networks and social support among substance users and on the relationship of youth leisure to patterns of victimization and offending, Scot Wortley is involved in a series of studies examining racial polarization of perceptions and experiences of criminal injustice and, more generally, systemic racism in the criminal justice system.

This quick tour is meant to illustrate how faculty at the Centre have chosen different approaches to addressing questions about the role of crime and its control in efforts to regulate society more generally. What Disney World, the Just Desserts Cafe, and Alcatraz have in common, then, is that each has served as a site for research activities of Centre faculty (Shearing and Stenning, 1984; Wortley, Macmillan and Hagan, 1997; Strange and Loo, 2000).

The Centre offers M.A. and Ph.D. programs in criminology, as well as a combined LL.B./M.A. degree, and collaborative graduate programs in Alcohol, Tobacco and Other Psychoactive Substances and Women's Studies. These programs are designed to educate students for teaching or research positions, and for careers in which an understanding of criminology and the ability to evaluate research critically are necessary. Each year approximately 20 M.A. students and 2-3 Ph.D. students enrol in the graduate program, and about 10 Junior Fellows are provided office space at the Centre. The M. A. program may be completed in nine or 12 months on a full-time basis, or over two years on a half-time basis. There are currently 17 Ph.D. students at the Centre, all of whom are supervised by the core faculty. The Ph.D. program requires full-time residence.

All core faculty also teach in the undergraduate criminology program at the University of Toronto, which is administered by Woodsworth College.

The Centre's Policy Advisory Role

From its inception, the Centre of Criminology has been committed to using its research as a bridge to practitioners, policy makers, and advocates in relevant fields in and outside of Canada. This is accomplished through the activities of individual faculty members, in their roles as consultants, and through seminars, workshops, and conferences sponsored by the Centre.

In recent months, a number of faculty have played key roles as consultants to policy makers. For example, Tony Doob served as a consultant to the Department of Justice, Canada on the development of the Youth Criminal Justice Act; Clifford Shearing served as a member of the Independent Commission on Policing for Northern Ireland and contributed to the Commission's recently released final report; Philip Stenning advised the Police Complaint Commissioner of British Columbia in his review of new police complaints legislation; and the Law Commission of Canada invited Mariana Valverde and a team of colleagues to write a theoretical position paper on "Law and Governance Relations."

In response to the recently enacted Ontario Safe Streets Act, which prohibits subsistence activities such as begging and squeegee work, the Centre co-sponsored a conference on the social and legal consequences of the Act in April 2000. The conference, organized by Joe Hermer, a Centre post-doctoral fellow, explored how the act will reconfigure the policing of social relations in public space. Also in April 2000, Philip Stenning and Benedikt Fischer organized an international comparative workshop (in collaboration with the Max Planck Institute in Frieburg, Germany) on research on private policing which was attended by researchers from over a dozen European countries, as well as from Canada and the U.S. Other recent activities sponsored by the Centre include the first Conference on Criminology and Criminal Justice in the Caribbean, which was held in Barbados in October 1998. Scot Wortley, who played a lead role in this conference, is currently helping to organize a second one to be held in early 2001.

The Criminology Information Service (CIS), which plays an integral role in research and teaching at the Centre, also provides professional and innovative services to government agencies, practitioners, and the general public, as well as scholars, worldwide. The CIS houses the leading Canadian research collection of criminological material, consisting of more than 25,000 books, journals, government reports, and other documents which can be accessed in person or electronically via the World Wide Web.

The Centre also has gained a high profile in local and national media, which provide a forum for faculty contributions to public information and debates over criminal justice policy and laws. One consequence of our location in Toronto, the largest city in Canada and the hub of its print and telecommunications media, is the regular presence around the Centre of camera crews (which are typically accompanied by requests from colleagues to borrow some piece of suitable attire).

Other Centre Activities

One of the major activities of Centre staff and faculty in the last three years has been preparing for and undergoing reviews, of which there have been three. The first, in 1998, was the regular five-year review which occurs in the last year of a director's term. The second, in 1999, was part of a university-wide review and planning process. The third, which we are now in the midst of, is the regular seven-year review conducted by the Ontario Council of Graduate Studies. "Review burn-out?", you might well ask. Nevertheless, the reviews have some benefits, not least of which are the detailed and thoughtful reports written by our external reviewers (which, I am pleased to note, were very positive). Let me share some not-so-randomly selected statements from these reviews: "The Centre is a most remarkable example of what an intellectual community in a university ought to be"; "The Centre is that rarity in academic life, a genuinely interdisciplinary enterprise [that] coheres around a common intellectual curiosity and sense of adventure rather than around a disciplinary core"; "The Centre is as warm and collegial a social and working environment for its graduate students as for its faculty."

What I hope these statements convey is the Centre's distinctive character, one that embraces intellectual diversity at the same time as it fosters community. That community is quickly apparent to visitors to the Centre who comment on our unusual interior design (what one visitor coined "managing through aesthetics") which includes displays of artwork by local artists and comfortable couches arranged for use as 'discussion areas' by staff, faculty and students. Our annual end-of-the-year party in June sees another example of that community: the Sketch. "Charlie's Angels", "The Return of Martin Guerre," and The Spice Girls are related in that each has served as the model for one of these annual Sketches -- modified, respectively (though not always respectfully) as "Tony's Angels," "The Return of John Beattie," and "The Vice Girls." We find that poking fun at each other is a much better way of relieving tension than arguing over budget cuts.

Finally, I promised an answer to the question "How many criminologists does it take to fix a broken window?" I recently asked staff, students and faculty to come up with answers to this question, and then vote for their favorites. My favorite entry, which placed second in the popular vote, was: "Enough to deliver a just measure of pane." To view the winning entry and learn more about the people, activities, and operations of the Centre of Criminology at the University of Toronto, I invite you to visit our web site at: www.library.utoronto.ca/www/libraries\_crim/centre/centre.htm.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Partners in health, partners in crime: Explorations of the relationship between criminology and sociology of health and health care. We invite outline proposals for contributions to the eighth monograph in the series to be published by Sociology of Health & Illness, in conjunction with Blackwell Publishers, in the year 2002. The monograph will explore the borderland between the realm of crime, violence and law enforcement, and the world of medicine and health care. Possible contributions include:

- The medicalisation of crime in courts and law enforcement
- Shifting medical conceptualisations of criminal acts, violence and criminal offenders
- Changes in the criminalisation of contested medical interventions
- Social patterning of crime and its relationship to addiction, violence, mental health and health care in general

We expect the majority of papers to report original empirical research but innovative theoretical and conceptual work will also be considered. We particularly welcome contributions from international researchers. The monograph will appear both as a regular issue of the journal and in book form. Potential contributors from North, Central and South America should send an outline proposal of up to 800 words by November 30, 2000 to: Stefan Timmermans, Sociology Department MS 071, Brandeis University, Waltham, MA 02154-9110, USA; fax (+1) 781-736-2653; e-mail: Timmermans@brandeis.edu. Authors from Europe and elsewhere should send their outline by the same date to: Jonathan Gabe, Department of Social and Political Science, Royal Holloway, University of London, Egham, Surrey TW20 0EX; Fax (+44) (0) 1784 434375; email j.gabe@rhbc.ac.uk. Outlines should take a structured form and for empirical papers should include (a) the major thesis or hypothesis (b) methods (c) data sources (d) a summary of findings and (e) conclusions. We will review all proposals and give notification of the outcome by January 14, 2001. We ask those invited to contribute to the monograph to submit articles of 6000-7000 words by July 1, 2001. All contributions will be refereed in the usual way and should follow the journal's stylistic guidelines. The monograph's planned publication date is September 2002.

JOURNAL OF CONTEMPORARY CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Recently published Organized Crime: South of the Border (Fall 1999). It included articles on Latin American transnational crime. A second volume with the same name (Part 2) will be published next year. If you have written or intend to write a paper on organized crime in Mexico, Central or South America or the Caribbean, or transnational organized crime involving those countries, I hope you will consider submitting it for review. The articles must not have been published elsewhere or be under consideration by any other publisher. The volume date is

Winter 2000. For additional information, contact Dr. Robert J. McCormack, Guest Editor, Department of Law & Justice at the College of New Jersey, P. O. Box 7718, Ewing, NJ 08628-0718 609-771-3185; E-mail: mccormac@tcnj.edu

CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND BEHAVIOR

A special issue of Criminal Justice and Behavior will be published in 2001 on the topic of Victimology. Papers may focus on empirical or theoretical issues and may include literature reviews, commentary, or empirical studies. Manuscripts are limited to 25 typewritten, double-spaced pages, including graphs, charts, figures and tables. Criminal Justice and Behavior is published in APA format. Please adhere to the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (1994, 4th Edition) concerning headings, page numbering, abstract, author note page, tables/figures, and references. All submissions will be peer reviewed. Submissions are due October 2, 2000. Submissions should be sent to: Laura J. Moriarty, Guest Editor, Criminal Justice and Behavior, College of Humanities and Sciences, 923 W. Franklin, Room 505, P. O. Box 842019, Richmond, VA 23284-2019. If you need additional information, contact the guest editor at LJMORIAR@VCU.EDU or call (804) 828-1674.

THE JUSTICE PROFESSIONAL

Special Edition, "Native Americans and the U.S. Criminal Justice System". The Justice Professional invites scholars to submit manuscripts for a special edition of its journal on "Native Americans and the U.S. Criminal Justice System." Manuscripts must be typed, double-spaced, and not to exceed 30 pages in length (including tables, charts, notes, etc.) Four copies of the manuscript should be submitted, accompanied by an abstract of 100 words and a brief biographical sketch of the author(s), indicating affiliation, research interests, and recent publications. Manuscripts should follow APA guidelines for citations, notes, and references. Manuscripts should be addressed to either of the co-editors listed. The deadline for submissions is August 2001. All manuscripts submitted for publication to The Justice Professional are peer-reviewed.

CALL FOR PAPERS

POLICE PRACTICE AND RESEARCH: AN INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL

Manuscripts are being solicited for a new global journal, Police Practice and Research: An International Journal, the official publication of the International Police Executive Symposium, which will be published in four issues per volume. Articles and reports are sought from practitioners, researchers, and others interested in developments in policing, analysis of public order, and the state of safety as it affects the quality of life everywhere. The journal will bridge the gap in knowledge that exists regarding who the police are, what they do, and how they maintain order, administer laws, and serve their communities. Attention will also be focused on specific organizational information about the police in different countries and regions, and there will be periodic special issues devoted to studying police policies and practices from a particular country of continent.

The editors aim to improve cooperation between those who are active in the field and those who are involved in academic research, as such a relationship is essential for innovative police work. To this end, the editors encourage the submission of articles coauthored by police practitioners and researchers that will highlight a particular subject from both points of view.

Manuscripts should be no more than 30 typed, double-spaced pages with text presented on one side of paper in English. The manuscripts should be accompanied by an abstract of no more than 100 words, up to six key words, and a brief biographical abstract. For complete Notes of Contributors, contact: Arvind Verma, Managing Editor, Department of Criminal Justice, Indiana University, Bloomington, IN 47405, USA.

PHILIPPINE JOURNAL OF LAW AND JUSTICE Published by Silliman University

The PHILIPPINE JOURNAL OF LAW AND JUSTICE is soliciting original papers from those who examine issues of law, crime and justice in developing nations. The Journal is particularly interested in work that examines such issues in Southeast Asia. Both quantitative and qualitative research is solicited.

The editorial scope encompasses interdisciplinary manuscripts that use scientific methods to:

1. examine law, legal procedure, and legal practice;
2. explore areas in legal development and reform;
3. understand the social, economic, behavioral and political aspects of crime, deviance and justice;
4. explore the etiology, prevention, control and treatment of crime and deviance;
5. measure and detect crime and deviance in society; and
6. explore, understand and improve the law enforcement, prosecutorial, judicial and correctional systems.

Papers should be submitted via email as attached files. In the event that an email submission is not possible or practical, a disk copy of the paper (in Microsoft Word) can be submitted. The submission should include an abstract of no more than 100 words, and a brief biographical sketch of the author(s), including affiliation, research interest, and recent publications. Citations and references should follow APA format. Submit all papers and address all correspondence to: Rose-Liza V. Eisma, Editor, PHILIPPINE JOURNAL OF LAW AND JUSTICE, College of Law, Silliman University, Dumaguete City 6200, PHILIPPINES – 635-225-8287 (phone/fax) law@su.edu.ph

COSSA WASHINGTON UPDATE*CONGRESS STARTS MOVING FUNDING BILLS; SOME ANTICIPATE OCTOBER "TRAIN WRECK"

by

David Hess, Associate Director for Public Affairs
Consortium of Social Science Associations (COSSA)

In an effort to have most of the Fiscal Year (FY) 2001 appropriations bills ready for floor action by the end of July, House and Senate Republican leaders are pushing their committee and subcommittee appropriations chairmen to speedily consider and approve their bills. Despite calls for quick action on the funding bills, observers are pointing to another budget showdown in early October between Republican congressional leaders and President Clinton. Much like last year, it is widely expected that the budget "train wreck" will result in several key concessions that will allow both the administration, along with Congressional Democrats, and Republican leaders to claim partial victory. This will be an important end-product for each party as they look to head home with ammunition for the upcoming November election.

A Positive Start Followed By Veto Threats

The appropriations cycle got off to a positive, if not short-lived, start for the House and Senate Republican leadership. Congress met its statutory deadline of passing a non-binding budget resolution by April 15. The House passed its version by a near party-line vote of 220-208, while the Senate passed its budget bill by a slim 50-48 vote. Despite the seemingly encouraging start, however, things haven't run as smoothly for the Republican leadership. First, and perhaps most important, is the fact that the budget resolution falls well short of President Clinton's FY 2001 budget request. The House-Senate conference budget agreement calls for non-defense discretionary spending of $289.4 billion, $7 billion less than FY 2000, and nearly $20 billion less than the administration's request. Because of the low levels of spending in several key areas, including crime fighting and education, administration officials and key Congressional Democrats have already mentioned the likely possibility of presidential vetoes of several of the FY 2001 spending bills. In a May 2 speech at the Urban Institute, Office of Management and Budget Director Jack Lew noted that "absent significant improvements to the appropriations . . . the President simply cannot and will not sign them." He vowed that the administration would "stick to our guns pretty hard."

Thus far, the House Appropriations Committee has approved seven of the 13 appropriations bills and the full House has followed through and approved only two funding measures. The Senate Appropriations Committee, on the other hand, has approved only six funding measures, while the full Senate has passed only one measure. The Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill that provides funds for programs within the Office of Justice Programs, including the National Institute of Justice (NIJ), the Bureau of Justice Statistics, and the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention (OJJDP), has not received action in either the House or the Senate. It is expected, however, that the House Commerce, Justice, State (CJS) Appropriations Subcommittee will take up its measure the first week of June. The Senate CJS Appropriations Subcommittee is also expected to take up its measure in early June.

$1.2 Billion Youth Violence Initiative

The massive funding bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education (Labor-HHS-Education) has passed both the House and Senate Appropriations Committees and awaits floor action. This bill, usually one of the last to see legislative action, provides funds to several Federal agencies that conduct social and behavioral science research, including the National Institutes of Health, the Department of Education's Office of Educational Research and Improvement (OERI), and the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Of particular interest to criminologists and other social and behavioral scientists is the Senate version which contains a Youth Violence Prevention Initiative.

The Senate Appropriations Committee provided $1.2 billion for a coordinated approach which "will improve research, prevention, education, and treatment strategies to address youth violence." Noting that youth violence is a public health problem, and that "many familial, psychological, biological, and environmental factors contribute to youths' propensity toward violence," the initiative is a collaborative and coordinated approach to "eliminate the conditions which cultivate violence." The funds, reallocated from existing programs, come largely from the National Institutes of Health, particularly the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH), National Institute of Drug Abuse (NIDA), and the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA), and the Department of Education.

Samuels Takes Helm at NIJ

In April, President Clinton designated Julie E. Samuels to serve as Acting Director of the National Institute of Justice (NIJ). Samuels takes the position from long-time NIJ leader Jeremy Travis who left the agency to become a Senior Fellow at the Urban Institute. The new Acting Director has a long history in the field of criminal justice. After graduating from the University of California at Berkeley's Graduate School of Public Policy, she joined the Office of Policy and Management Analysis (OPMA), within the Department's Criminal Division, in 1979 as a Presidential Management Intern. Samuels became Director of OPMA in 1986, and — with a couple of intervening details and special projects — served in that position until being named NIJ's Acting Director.

Controlling Crime in America: Focus of Upcoming COSSA Briefing

The Consortium of Social Science Associations (COSSA) plans to sponsor a June 9 congressional briefing titled: "Controlling Crime in America." Alfred Blumstein, Carnegie Mellon University professor, COSSA President, and head of the National Consortium on Violence Research (NCOVR), will lead the panel and examine gun violence in America. Fox Butterfield, reporter from the New York Times, will talk about rampage killings, and Laura Dugan, professor from Georgia State University and NCOVR member, will examine interpersonal domestic violence. COSSA Executive Director Howard Silver will serve as the event's moderator. For more information about the briefing, or to receive an edited transcript, contact COSSA.

ABOLITIONISTS WILL GATHER TO BUILD STRATEGIES AT NATIONAL CONFERENCE

A major national conference this fall will bring together abolitionists from various constituencies to strategize about abolishing the death penalty in the new millenium. The conference, "Committing to Conscience: Building a Unified Strategy to End the Death Penalty," will be held in San Francisco from November 16-19 at the Cathedral Hill Hotel. It will be sponsored by the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, Murder Victims Families for Reconciliation, Death Penalty Focus of California, Amnesty International and the Religious Organizing Against the Death Penalty Project. In addition to the large group gatherings, each organization will meet with its own constituency during the conference. Participants will take part in training sessions on media and fund raising, and public demonstrations and presentations by key civil and human rights activists, including Sister Helen Prejean, Danny Glover and Mike Farrell. Attendees also will help develop a national anti-death penalty strategy. For more information, contact NCADP at 215/387-3890 or Death Penalty Focus at 415/243-0143

FULBRIGHT OFFERS LECTURING/RESEARCH GRANTS IN 130 COUNTRIES

The Fulbright Scholar Program's annual competition opened March 1 for lecturing and research grants in some 130 countries. Opportunities are open not only to college and university faculty and administrators, but also to professionals from the business community and government, as well as to artists, journalists, lawyers, independent scholars and many others.

Grants are available to faculty and administrators from two-year, four-year and graduate institutions. Fulbright awards vary from two months to an academic year or longer. While foreign language skills are needed in some countries, most lecturing assignments are in English. Some 80 percent of the awards are for lecturing.

Application deadlines for 2001-2002 grants are: November 1, 2000, for spring/summer seminars in Germany, Korea and Japan for international education and academic administrators as well as for the summer German studies seminar

For information, contact the Council for International Exchange of Scholars (CIES) at 3007 Tilden Street, NW, Suite 5L, Washington, DC 20008-3009. ## Crime and Criminology in the Year 2000: The Annual Meeting in San Francisco, November 14-19

Roland Chilton
President
American Society of Criminology

With the help of a large and active program committee, Program Chairs Deborah Baskin and Ira Sommers have put together a wide-ranging and interesting set of sessions. At this point it looks like it will be one of the ASC's largest annual meetings in several years. Fortunately, this is the third year in a row that the Sarah Hall and her staff have been experimenting with a computer program designed to help program chairs develop the preliminary program and prevent conflicts in the meeting schedule. This computer program will not eliminate all scheduling problems or produce a perfect meeting. It should minimize scheduling conflicts, permit changes within sessions, and allow most participants to attend the sessions that interest them most. However, there will still be some presentations scheduled for 8:00 AM and some scheduled for late afternoon.

The theme of this year's annual meeting, "Crime and Criminology in the year 2000," was selected to encourage participants to look back at the last century, to take stock of existing knowledge and practice, and to look forward to the next century. Since annual meeting themes are probably ignored by most of those attending professional meetings, perhaps the basic purpose of any theme is to allow those organizing the meeting to concentrate a small set of sessions on topics or issues of concern to the organizers. That, at least, has been one purpose of this year's theme.

However, the first awards plenary session, scheduled for Wednesday evening, is not thematic. The high point of the session will be an address by Norval Morris who is the recipient of this year's Sutherland Award. At the same session, the Ruth Cavan award will be presented and the winners of the student paper competition will be announced. The recipients of the minority fellowship awards will be introduced as well. Also on Wednesday, there will be a noontime plenary session that will look at the influence of California criminology and the impact of a very productive California criminologist. "Malcolm Klein's Contribution to the Study of Crime and Delinquency" will be discussed by a diverse set of criminologists (Cheryl Maxson, David Farrington, Robert Bursik, James Short, and Jody Miller).

Thursday's noontime plenary session will feature a number of distinguished criminologists (James Short, Lloyd Ohlin, Daniel Glaser, Freda Adler, William Chambliss, and Gerhard Mueller) talking about "High Points and Low Points of Twentieth Century Criminology". As people who have worked in the field for several decades of the Twentieth Century, they have each been asked to select at least one of the finest hours of criminology and at least one development or approach that they would describe as undesirable or counterproductive. There should be time for them to comment on each other's choices and for responses from those attending.

Friday's noontime plenary session looks forward in that its focus is on a set of issues and problems that will almost certainly continue into the next century. Franklin Zimring, James Austin, and Ethan Nadelmann will talk about "Incarceration, Inequality, and the Drug War in the 21st Century." The session should take up some of the issues discussed in a special report developed by this year's ASC National Policy Committee. At the Friday evening plenary session, the Sellin-Glueck, Vollmer, Bloch, and Hindelang awards will be presented. These presentations will be followed by a short presidential address (Roland Chilton) and the installation of C. Ronald Huff as the president of the Society for 2001.

Occurring around the plenary sessions will be hundreds of sessions devoted to a variety of topics that touch on almost every aspect of criminology and criminal justice. There will be a set of special sessions organized by the Program Committee's Area Chairs (George Bridges, Lisa Callahan, Drew Humphries, Cheryl Maxson, Karen Parker, and Quint Thurman). In addition, there will be the traditional informal professional and social activities and organizational meetings of all kinds. Moreover, the Local Arrangements Committee (Dorie Klein and Barry Krisberg) has put together a great list of places, activities, and events that take advantage of the meeting's location in San Francisco. So plan to start with the Wednesday morning sessions and stay through the Saturday sessions. Whatever your interest in crime and criminology, this meeting should have much that is worth your time.

2000 ANNUAL MEETING – SAN FRANCISCO

Debra Baskin and Ira Sommers
2000 Program Co-Chairs

The upcoming meetings in San Francisco promise to be quite exciting. The volume of requests to present papers has been awesome. To date, we have placed over papers into panels, roundtables, tables, and workshops. As many of you who attended the last meetings held at the St. Francis may remember, many of the rooms are quite small (holding 12 people) and others are quite large (holding well over 100). In order to avoid the problem faced last year in Toronto of holding more than one panel in a large room and also to accommodate the large number of submissions, we were forced to almost randomly assign panels to rooms. In addition, we had so many panels on overlapping topics (I. e., 51 panels on policing) that we were unable to avoid scheduling similarly themed panels at the same time. In addition, the unbelievably large number of late submissions complicated matters even more. Therefore, we are asking that everyone maintain a good sense of humor and enjoy the conference regardless of space and time problems.

A further note concerns hotel space. Currently the vast majority of rooms at the two conference hotels are booked. If you are holding a room and may not use it either for the entire length of the reservation or at all, please let them go so that others may book them. This year, in addition to the large number of U.S. participants, we also have an unprecedented number of international guests. We would like to be able to accommodate as many people as possible. For those of you who are having difficulty finding a hotel room, there are several really cute boutique hotels within a three block radius of the conference hotels. Sarah Hall has a list of them and would gladly share their names with those who are interested. Their rates are similar to the conference rates that we had obtained for the main hotels will be making a list of them and would gladly share their names with those who are interested. Their rates are similar to the conference rates that we had obtained for the main hotels.

CALL FOR PAPERS

THE FIRST EDITION OF THE JUSTICE POLICY JOURNAL

An On-line Journal

First Issue, Fall 2000

The Official Journal of the Justice Policy Institute

The purpose of the Justice Policy Journal (JPJ) is to provide a forum for the publication and discussion of current policy issues related to criminal and juvenile justice. The specific focus of the journal will be on the promulgation of innovative policy ideas and initiatives. Theoretical and historical approaches are encouraged, as long as these are related to current public policy issues. All forms of manuscript preparation are encouraged, including basic texts and tables in addition to other resources permitted on the Internet (e.g., graphics, hypertext). Stipends of $500 will be provided for each article accepted for publication.

The overall goal of JPJ is to provide a professional venue to practitioners, researchers, policy makers and critics on current issues related to criminal and juvenile justice. Each issue will not only have scholarly articles, but also commentaries, news briefs and up-dates on current legislative initiatives.

Article submissions to JPJ should be provided on a disk (and mailed through the normal postal route) or e-mail attachment. Include title page, abstract, institutional affiliation, brief biographical sketch, and an e-mail address.

The electronically submitted manuscript should be sent to JPJ in original word processing format. Send the document via e-mail as an attachment to journal@cjic.org or via postal service on a disk to:

Dan Macallair
Justice Policy Journal
1622 Folsom Street
San Francisco, CA 94103
415-621-5661

Scholarly articles should not exceed 30 typed pages (double-space), excluding endnotes, references, tables, etc. An abstract of no more than 250 words must accompany the title page of all manuscripts submitted. JPJ also encourages individuals to submit brief commentaries, reviews of current legislative initiatives, and news briefs. A stipend of $100 will be awarded for the publication of commentaries. The length of these reports may vary, but should not exceed five pages.

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENTS

THE CRIMINOLOGIST will regularly feature in these columns position vacancies available in organizations and universities, as well as positions sought by members of the Society.

A charge of $150.00 with the absolute maximum of 250 words allowed will be made. The position announcement will also appear on the ASC website: www.asc41.com. The charge will be waived for institutional members of ASC.

It is the policy of the ASC to publish position vacancies announcements only from those institutions or agencies which subscribe to equal education and employment opportunities and those which encourage women and minorities to apply.

Institutions should indicate the deadline for the submission of application materials. The Professional Employment Exchange will be a regular feature at each Annual Meeting. Prospective employers and employees should register with the Society no later than three weeks prior to the Annual Meeting of the Society. Appropriate forms may be obtained by writing to the ASC offices in Columbus, Ohio.

To place announcements in THE CRIMINOLOGIST, send all material to: Sarah Hall, ASC, 1314 Kinnear Road, Suite 212, Columbus, OH 43212-1156.

Telephone (614)292-9207, Fax (614)292-6767 or e-mail: asc41@infinet.com

When sending announcements, please include a phone number, fax number and contact person in the event we have questions about an ad. The deadline for the September/October issue is August 10, 2000.

CAPITAL UNIVERSITY

Assistant Professors, Criminology/Sociology. The Capital University Behavioral Sciences Department seeks three doctoral level criminologists/sociologists: (1) 12-month, tenure track position at the Dayton Center Adult Degree Program, (2) 12-month, tenure track position at the Columbus Center Adult Degree Program, and (3) 10-month, tenure track position in the traditional undergraduate program at the Columbus campus. Ideally, candidates should have research and teaching experience commensurate with the rank of assistant professor, an interest in teaching discipline-based courses (e.g., corrections, juvenile delinquency, the justice system/law, research methods), interdisciplinary general education courses and possibly a course sequence on substance abuse policy and research. Applicants to positions in the Adult Degree Program must be committed to teaching adult learners in a non-traditional, alternative delivery program. Interested candidates should send (1) a letter of interest outlining the applicant's educational philosophy, (2) a curriculum vitae, (3) copies of all academic transcripts, (4) examples of recent scholarship and teaching effectiveness, and (5) three letters of recommendation to Dr. Michael Torello, Behavioral Sciences Department, Capital University, 2199 E. Main Street, Columbus, OH 43209-2394. Founded in 1830 by the Lutheran Church, Capital University, located in Columbus, Ohio, with branch campuses in Dayton and Cleveland, Ohio, currently enrolls more than 4000 students in its College of Arts & Sciences, Conservatory of Music, School of Nursing, Graduate School of Administration and Law School. Capital University is an equal opportunity employer. Qualified women, disabled individuals and persons of color are encouraged to apply.

GEORGIA STATE UNIVERSITY

Criminal Justice: The Department of Criminal Justice at Georgia State University seeks to fill a tenure-track position at the Assistant Professor level with a specialty in law/legal studies. We will also consider applicants with other specialty areas. The position represents a nine-month appointment with annual review and the possibility of summer teaching.
